NORTHERN TERRITORY LABOUR MARKET REVIEW

September 2007

According to the ABS Labour Force Survey trend series for September 2007, the Northern Territory (NT) unemployment rate declined to 4.3 per cent (down 0.1 percentage points on the previous month which was revised downwards from 4.6 per cent). The Northern Territory rate is typically volatile and has increased from a low of 2.9 per cent in December last year and is currently marginally above the national unemployment rate which dropped to a new low of 4.2 per cent (the lowest rate since the ABS began the current trend series in 1978). The size of the NT labour force has grown strongly each month so far this year, with the labour force increasing to 113 900 in September. After a downward trend throughout the second half of last year the NT participation rate has increased each month so far this year and reached 73.5 per cent in September. The increase, combined with an increase in the civil population, has resulted in a labour force 8000 people larger than in September last year.

It is important to note that the Northern Territory labour force figures are highly volatile. Any interpretation of short term fluctuations are problematic due to the high standard errors relative to the size of the estimates. Rather, longer term trends should be considered. Other economic indicators suggest a strong demand for labour and a market where skilled labour is in short supply.

The NT economy is currently strong and business investment, driven by the resources boom, has resulted in higher export earnings. Growth in NT's gross state product is forecast to outpace national GDP each year for the next 5 years (June Access Economics forecast). The September Sensis Business Index for small and medium enterprises shows high business confidence for the next 12 months and an employment growth indicator that's the highest in Australia. However the NT's mega-projects have been completed or are drawing to a close and although the economy currently has positive momentum, a new mega-project is needed to retain the current strong growth.
